JO TAYLOR

Mixed media artist Jo Taylor is in constant pursuit of connecting with nature's majesty, in artistic practice and daily life. For her latest solo exhibition with Thompson's Gallery, Taylor spent significant time amongst the wild ponies of Exmoor in the West Country and Connemara in County Galway in the west of Ireland. Witnessing the horses in their natural habitat, living in herds and acting purely instinctively away from human influence, the artist came upon her exhibition title – 'Running Wild'.

Across her observations in these regions, Taylor also encountered droves of deer and magnificent birds of prey. These have emerged as subjects in their own right, executed at a large and awe inspiring scale. Central to 'Running Wild' is the concept of landscape and being present within it. Through years of walking, riding, and embracing the elements of the wilderness, the artist has incorporated land mass and weather more strongly than ever before in this body of work.

Jo Taylor obtained her degree from Leeds Metropolitan University and afterward completed an artist's residency at the University of Liverpool's Department of Veterinary Science. The artist has exhibited widely throughout the UK, America and Dubai, with numerous notable collections held worldwide. In 2012 she became the first female artist to exhibit at The Jockey Club. Join Thompson's Gallery in celebration of this new exhibition by the UK's leading wildlife artist, and a true advocate of its natural wonders.
